I believe that filmmaking is a collaborative effort. The success of film is dependent on all parts converging into a story that seizes the audience and takes them on a thrilling or emotional ride. My directing abilities are strengthened by my experiences in other areas of filmmaking: My background in editing allows me to visualize how pieces of the film puzzle will form a cohesive story in the editing room. My acting experience inspires me to create an environment where actors have the freedom and support to connect with their characters and reach their best performances. My producing experience has taught me to be flexible and willing to think outside the box when logistical road bumps deter an original plan. Overall, my editing, acting, and producing credits enhance my ability to successfully direct a film with leadership, creativity, and flexibility.
